The mystery of the cat through the ages and her storied association with the culture of ancient Egypt is the theme of this month's inspired example of photographic art. The statue is of the Kaffir cat domesticated by the Egyptians some 6,000 years ago; the background figures and hieroglyphs are from a temple wall of that early civilization. Reproduction is by courtesy Chicago Natural History Museum.

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED

In the April CATS a small footnote asked for reactions to a suggestion that we devote a portion of CATS to the interests of junior owners of plain and fancy cats.

Response from young people throughout the United States and Canada has been overwhelmingly favorable, and we are glad to announce that starting next month "Tommy" Brodie will begin conducting a column for and about you of our readers up to eighteen or so.

We know that all readers, young and old, are already encouraging young people to find in cats as pets and as friends those values which can add so much to living. So, aside from its worth to those who are now cat lovers, it is our hope that the new feature will aid all of us in introducing the spirit of the cat to teenagers everywhere.

At first the column will appear every three months—oftener as soon as interest and material require. Send suggestions, news, and contributions to Mrs. Brodie's new address: 1118 Monica Lance, Madison, Wisconsin, or to CATS Magazine, Junior Department, at Pittsburgh.

MYTHOLOGICAL HEAVEN

Dear Editors:

Being a cat, Loki loves high places and can't resist a ladder no matter where it is. Named for the Norse gods, Loki has two brothers, Thor, the thunder and Odin, the chief of all the gods. Thor and Loki are look-alikes and Odin is a beautiful tiger cat and the largest of the three.

They are god-like cats indeed, in size as well as beauty. Not yet eight months old, they weigh over eleven pounds each.

These three have indeed made our home a Valhalla.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO...

Dear Editors:

We were very happy to learn how well cats are remembered in Florida (June CATS).

Some friends and I were traveling through Moline, Illinois, in 1942 and noticed this interesting pet cemetery.

I wonder if some of your readers might know if it is still operating.

SALUTE TO THE WASHINGTON POST

Dear Editors:

While I take this opportunity to congratulate you on your delightful magazine (which is sheer joy to all cat lovers), I think the Washington Post and Times Herald deserves to be decorated with the Order of the Golden Cat (if there is such a thing). In practically every issue it carries some interesting cat story, invariably viewed from a sympathetic angle. I am positive the editorial staff is made up of cat lovers.

I saw your magazine for the first time at a cat show and a few days later became a subscriber. My husband and I have two cats, male and female, and both adorable. They are very young but have already managed to produce eleven kittens. All were very beautiful, but also a problem to place. Consequently, we had Jaquar neutered and now Penquin is rather bewildered at his cold reception to her affectionate advances.

Do keep up the good work and count me among your staunchest admirers and supporters.

CAT STAMPS

Dear Editors:

You will remember that about two years ago you published an enchanting picture of a little cat by a dustbin to illustrate a request from me for cancelled stamps. Since the publication of that picture, which by the way was very like my cat, Bubbles, who made the appeal, newspapers have taken up the request and to date we are receiving cancelled American and foreign stamps from practically every state.

So interested have people become that many Americans on vacation to this country visit us to see our work first hand. Mrs. Kraus of New Jersey was so impressed that she has formed a similar league there.

The sale of the stamps goes towards the practical work of the league. At the moment they bring in a return of roughly £10 per month. Our thanks to CATS Magazine, for many otherwise hopeless English kits and cats are now either living happy and contented lives with kind owners, having been kept until rehabilitated through the sale of these stamps or have received a humane and merciful passing if they were too old or ailing to be saved.

May CATS Magazine go from strength to strength with all good wishes.

CHANNEL CATS

Dear Editors:

My cats and I are avid television fans, each having favorite programs and it is a constant battle as to which channel we'll watch.

They quickly learned they could change stations by simply pushing down on the button. They do this when they don't care for my choice.

One evening I was busy and hadn't bothered turning TV on and they decided to do it themselves. I took this picture of Byron trying to turn on the set with much help, mostly vocal, from his brother, Edward.

They didn't manage, but the tooth marks on the dials showed they really did try.

ALL FOR ONE

Dear Editors:

I have an enclosed porch in which I keep my plants, but every available inch of wall space there is covered with cat photos. I save them and particularly like the covers of CATS. Several of them remind me of our cat, Honey.

She was given to me by our veterinarian, who, rather than destroy a litter and the young mother who was abandoned by someone, advertised in the paper and found good homes for all of them. Honey was obsessed by fear and it has taken me a long time to calm her.

Many people interested in cats stop in to look and admire my pictures. So many people love cats but can't have them in their homes. One day, children selling cookies stopped by and were delighted with the collection. The next day they came back with playing cards with kittens on the back that they had taken from their collection of cards to add to my cats on display.

There seems to be a bond among cat lovers.

1959's GREAT CATS IN REVIEW

Show season 1958–59 comes to its peak with this issue of CATS Magazine. All over America there have been more shows, more entries, more exhibitors and more spectators than ever before, and now the climax—the announcement of the Cat of the Year, the O.S. Cat of the Year, and all of the All-Americans and American Honorable Mentions.

Fittingly enough, this greatest season of all ends with its highest award going to a cat who has compiled the highest total of All-American points in history: the marvelous Black Longhair Male Grand Champion Vel-Vene's Voodoo owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Green of Cedar Grove, N. J.

TEN TOP-SCORING ALL-AMERICAN CATS

1. Gr. Ch. VEL-VENE'S VOODOO, Black Longhair male.
2. Db. Gr. & Qd. Ch. FAN-T-CEE'S KABAR KENNY, Blue Point Siamese male.
3. RM Qd. Gr. Ch. ROSEMONT GOLDEN ADONIS, Cream Longhair male.
4. Gr. Ch. CAREER GIRL OF NOR-MONT, Blue Longhair female.
5. Tr. Gr. Ch. WOLFGANG'S FRAUNDE OF TIMFY, Seal Point Siamese female.
6. Gr. & Qd. Ch. FAN-T-CEE'S ENCHANTRESS, Seal Point Siamese female.
7. Gr. Ch. NOR-MONT BLUE PARADER, Blue Longhair male.
8. Tr. Gr. Ch. FAN-T-CEE'S WILL-O-WEE OF TAP-TOE, Blue Point Siamese female.
9. Qd. Ch. WINDIBANK PATTI-KAKE OF AZULITA, Orange-Eyed White Longhair female.
10. Db. Gr. & Tr. Ch. SILVER MESA SIR VALLIANT, Chinchilla Longhair male.

When Voodoo won All-Eastern and All-American in 1958 knowing judges and fanciers predicted great things for him, but only his owners, and not even they, perhaps, could have dreamed of all he was to accomplish. His twenty-three Best Cat wins, eleven in All Breed and twelve in Specialties—plus three Second Best Cat trophies—have never been approached in the Fancy, nor has his total of more than 2,000 A-A points. To Voodoo and to the Greens goes the acclaim of all cat people.

Miss All-America and 1959 O.S. Cat of the Year is the fascinating Grand Champion Career Girl of Nor-Mont, outstanding Blue Longhair of Mrs. Merald E. Hoag of Rockville, Maryland. Her record shows only two Best in Show wins, but by backing them up with a tremendous eight Second Best and fifteen Best Opposite Sex in Show awards she garnered the point totals to top all of the fair sex.

Second Best American Cat, and Shorthair Cat of the Year goes to the West's spectacular youngster, Mrs. Fred Galvin's Db. Gr. & Qd. Ch. Fan-T-Cee's Kabar Kenny, Blue Point Siamese male who is at the apex of his breed. Sharing the Shorthair throne is the hauntingly beautiful O.S. Shorthair of the Year—Tr. Gr. Ch. Wolfgang's Fraunde of Timfy, Seal Point Siamese of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Denny.

This is the sixth time that a Nor-Mont cat has been either CY or OSCY, and last year saw the Wolfgang prefix on the OSCY and Best Shorthair and the Fan-T-Cee prefix on the O.S. Shorthair . . . a rare series of repeats.

Also repeating their All-American appearances this year are familiar feline names going as far back as 1953 when Gr. & Qd. Gr. Ch. Longhill's Tres Chic of Flagstone made her entry. 1954 saw Qd. Ch. Lamar's Tabithan, who died at the end of this season, win his first award along with Gr. Ch. Ru-Ling Rusty. In 1955 came Qd. Gr. Ch. Dalai Jakki and Gr. & Qd. Ch. Senza Coda Tizabu of Sunni Slope. Ten other of this year's winners were on the 1956 A-A scroll, twelve others started in 1957, and 29 additional in 1958.

Top-scoring 1959 Kitten is Ch. Smithway Lilabet; O.S. is Chi Chareon Coolie.

Altogether there are 98 All-American and 88 American Honorable Mention awards being granted. They go to the top winners of the more than 10,000 cats which appeared in the 1958–59 shows throughout the U.S. and Canada. Of these many contestants, 2,459 gained All-American points for Best O.S. Color, or better, wins. Final awards were made by the impartial All-American scoring system which places proportionate mathematical values on every win in every show.

There were 92 such All Breed plus specialty shows last season, divided 15 ACA, 30 ACFA, 30 CFA, 13 CFF, and 4 UCF. (These totals count "combined shows"—where there are two All Breeds—as two shows. ACFA held eight such combined shows; CFA, CFF, and UCF one each.) Geographically shows were divided: 30 in the West, 24 Midwest, 22 East, and 16 South.

FEWLINES 'BOUT FELINES

MISS PLUME

See, I have lit the fire, Miss Plume,
And settled down to read a book.
Oh, surely somewhere in this room
Two eyes are watching from a nook.
Now any moment I may hear
The self-assurance of your "Prrt"
And feel the softness of you near,
The gentle tugging at my skirt.

Where are you, little Cindy Cat?
Not underneath the big arm chair;
I looked there twice—so certain that
You must be curled up sleeping there.
I searched each empty window sill,
And opened kitchen cupboards wide.
But all the hanging cups were still—
Not one small kitty ghost inside.

—Ruby Lytle

Why so scrawny, cat?
Starved for fat fish or mice . . .
Or back yard love?
Basho, Japanese Haiku (Peter Pauper)

WASH DAY

My cat, like Huckleberry Finn,
Thinks wash day is a mortal sin.
She watches while I neatly spread
Fresh, laundered sheets upon the bed—
Her silence, voicing disapproval
Of friendly little smells' removal.

—Ruby Lytle

FOUNDLING

"Oh, no!" says father.
"Oh, no!" says mother.
But each time I
Bring home another,
I let them feel
Its baby fur
And watch it play
And hear it purr
And see it wash
When it has slept,
And pretty soon
The kitten's kept.

—Ethel Jacobson

BLUE CAT

You siesta through the warm hours
Among my choicest flowers,
Your expression so beguiling
You appear to be smiling.
Do you enjoy flower incense,
Or is it just a pretense
To escape a gardner's frown?
You little blue feline clown!

—Marie Converse

KITTEN AT PLAY

There is nothing quite so wildly gay
as the ecstacy of a kitten's play,
When he suddenly leaps to a higher place
and with rare abandon flips through space!
Then surprised he turns a somersault.
Crash! suddenly he calls a halt.
Then with a mad dash under the bed
He emerges coyly, rubber mouse in teeth and jumps over chair and underneath.
A nice, dangling string now catches his eye,
All else forgotten he leaps up high and tugs and pulls and slaps at his prize—
What wonderful fun in a wee kitten's eyes!
He lifts my spirits as I watch him play
and his tireless glee adds cheer to my day.

—Frances P. Graaf

Ah, unrequited love!
Now elevate your chin and keen,
Tomcat, to the moon.
Kyorai, Japanese Haiku (Peter Pauper)

SIAMESE SOUND

Exotic music wanders through
The quiet house where they reside,
And, echoing from every wall,
Their song is heard inside.
A clinging whisper, yet a call,
It permeates the entrance hall,
And drones through windows of clear glass
To other felines on the grass.
Birds are sighing far above
Could this be the call of love?

—Lois Utz

WHEREFORE CATS

Cats weren't made
To sculpt in jade,
Rather, were created
To chasten man,
Who little can
Stand himself berated.

For cats pre-empt,
Through sheer contempt
Of human hurry-scurry,
The ancient myth
That fortune's with
The being that can worry!

—John F. McLaughlin

PROGNOSTICATION FOR AN INVESTIGATOR

On Gumshoe feet you stalk your prey,
Wee kitten only whisper high,
Born with sure instinct how to play
The Shadow's game, "I Spy."

No thieving moth, no bunko bug,
No brigand gnat, no furtive fly,
No sneaky dust-thug on the rug,
Escapes your PRIVATE EYE.

O furry fluff of derring-do,
All UNDERCOVER on the sly,
Your fierce conceits point clearly to
Big-cat coups bye and bye.

—Betty Preston Davis

ODE TO A PERSIAN

What's this coughing and sneezing
And wheezing?
Now, gee . . .
Don't tell me you
Are allergic to me!

—Jean Martin

CAT SHOW

We went to the cat show,
The Lady and I.
She looked on her kinfolk
With fire in her eye.

She glared at a Persian
Asleep in his cage,
And startled a Manx
With her scream of rage.

She swore at the judge
As he came her way,
Scratched his hand
And called it a day.

Her pedigree's awesome,
Her patience is not.
Her claws are too active
Her temper's too hot.

My Siamese Lady
Has shown me today,
It's not ribbons she wants,
It's just her own way.

—Hazel Martin

ADOPTION

Although there are uncounted cats
With slanted eyes dew-pearled,
There are so many more of us
To fill the sprawling world,

That flags of pride may justly flly,
Horns sing triumphant scores.
When of the hearts she might pursue
A lonely stray picks yours!

—Georgette Weiser

CATS, BABIES OR BOTH

by Hazel Smith

Our illustration is by photographer Bill Balogh, whose own sixteen-month-old Julie and her bottle-fed kitten obviously confirm Mrs. Smith's experiences.

I guess it must have been some time before the thought penetrated the happy daze I was in, but once it crept into my mind, I spent a lot of time wondering just how my four little feline children would accept the newcomer who was scheduled for fall arrival.

The cats were petted, pampered, and spoiled but that was the limit of their similarity. They had four, separate, individual personalities, so I knew I could expect to get four different reactions.

I hadn't really anyone to turn to for guidance, and it would not be honest to say that I didn't have any qualms about how the cats and the baby would get along together. However, I couldn't bring myself to face the possibility of having to get rid of the cats. They were as much a part of my life as eating and breathing, but on the other hand so was my dream of having a baby.

Naturally, there were plenty of people ready to give advice from the sidelines, whether they were qualified to advise or not. Most of the suggestions were to get rid of those nasty cats before the baby arrived. But I loved each and every one of "those nasty cats" so I was determined to make every effort to help them to accept my baby before even considering any other course of action.

The first few days after we brought Julie home were hectic, as they are in any household after the arrival of a new baby. Julie was quite unaware of the existence of the cats but the cats were certainly aware of her presence. Each cat, as expected, reacted in a different manner and the only reaction they had in common was their very natural feline curiosity.

Red, a typical bachelor type, was least curious about the noisy newcomer. He seemed to try to pretend that his nice, quiet, orderly existence hadn't been disrupted but quite often he was forced to take refuge on the roof of the house next door. The reason for this particular choice has never been disclosed but it seemed to make sense to Red.

Curiously enough it was Rebecca, Red's beautiful Calico twin sister, who was most interested in the newcomer. I had shown the baby to the cats when we first arrived home, and had given them instructions in stern tones of voice and emphatic sign language that they were to keep their distance. Rebecca was the only one of the four whose curiosity overwhelmed her. One day she jumped onto the bed to investigate the sleeping bundle and was severely reprimanded. After that, she kept her distance until the baby was old enough to sit up and really get acquainted with cats. 'Becca and Julie became good friends and shared many happy hours before 'Becca's untimely death the following summer.

Chula, being Siamese, was just a little more spoiled and pampered than the less demanding other three. So it was expected that she would probably give me the most trouble with the baby. Happily, things turned out quite differently. No doubt her good behavior was a result of the relief she felt when she found that the baby would have a bed of her own and she (Chula) could continue to sleep with me. Before long, she had appointed herself "mama's helper" and whenever Julie cried, Chula sat under her bed and added her voice (which was that of a normal healthy Seal Point Siamese) to the din. If that didn't bring me on the run she would come to me and tug at the hem of my dress. When Chula herself became a mother, Julie was seven months old and soon she and the four kittens were playing together under Chula's careful supervision. Chula never became excited if Julie treated a kitten roughly—she merely put herself between Julie and the kit. And she was equally careful to see that the kittens did not get too rough with the baby.

I try to think it was just coincidence that soon after Julie's arrival, my beautiful, old Inky, very special and very dear, went into a decline. That's an old-fashioned phrase, I know, but no other describes the situation so well. Inky was a mature cat when he came to live with me and I had had him for about six years. The best estimate of his age that our veterinarian and I could agree on was "about eleven." The best description I can give is just to say that he was the spit and image of the popular cartoon character Sylvester.

At any rate, Inky had reached the age where it took extra care and frequent medical checkups to keep him in good health. His indomitable pride, which would not let him stoop to eating soft foods after he had lost most of his teeth, was an added factor in my concern for his well-being. Despite the assurances of our veterinarian that at his apparent age such a thing was to be expected, I've always suspected that his heart, so generous in sharing with other cats, quietly broke when he saw my love and devotion to my baby. Oh, he made attempts to show a polite interest in the baby, but more and more he kept to himself. Perhaps he was just very old and very tired. Anyway, four months after our baby came into our lives, we had to have Inky put to sleep. It was apparent to everybody, even to me, that it was the greatest kindness we could show him.

Since that time we have had six other cats in and out of the household. The only one left of the "original four" is Red, who, while still not chummy with Julie, has certainly never attempted to harm her and has become more tolerant of her presence since she has grown large enough to open doors for him. In addition to him, our family at this time includes Chula's youngest son, Me Too, and a young Frost Point Siamese girl, Amethyst. Recently a little, long-haired, yellow fellow has taken refuge under our house after being chased into the yard by some dogs, and probably by the time we get him tamed enough to make somebody a good pet, he will have decided to be our pet.

None of our cats have been anything other than patient with Julie, who is now almost four. They haven't always gotten along perfectly, to be sure, but any

TRUE LOVE . . . . . OR SUMMER ROMANCE?

There is nothing in this wide old world more tender than young love. This quiet study of Marmelade cat and barefoot friend leaves no doubt of it.

Even if this is a parting caress, we know that neither of them will ever quite forget the summer they spent together.

Mrs. John D. Kaiser, 11 Anfred Walk, St. Louis, took the one chance in a hundred that her sensitive shot of a boy and a cat would override the adamant objection of the judges to people in the Picture of the Month award winner. The hunch paid off.

Mrs. Kaiser noted that she used a Voigtlander camera, 1/100 at f. 11, with Verichrome Pan film.

"Tips to the Novice" by Blanche Wolfram

DERMATOMYCOSIS

Dermatomycosis is an infection of the skin and the fur of our cats which is brought about by fungi. In simple terms it is RINGWORM.

Fungi are a low order of the plant kingdom and are not like the type of plants which grow all about us, for they do not have roots, stems, leaves or chlorophyl. Those causing "ringworm" are very small and can be seen only with the aid of a microscope.

There are many, many different kinds but those that affect our cats are known as Microsporum felineum, Microsporum gypseum and Trichophyton verrucosum.

They attack only the outer layers of the skin, the fur, and sometimes the claws of a cat because these particular tissues are composed of keratin upon which the fungi thrive. Because keratin is found only in the tissues mentioned, the fungi do not invade the deeper layers of the skin nor do they attack the internal organs.

The manner in which they grow is by spores. When these spores come in contact with skin they immediately begin the growing process. Within the skin long filaments called hypha are seen branching off in every direction. Hypha also grow outside the skin and it is from these that the spores are produced. The spores come in contact with our cats from floating in the air, lying on the ground or floor, being spread from cat to cat by other cats or by people. There are many ways this can happen and it is up to us to try to stop the spreading of spores.

Since I detest the word ringworm, I will refer to it as fungus from now on. It has been some time since we had a discussion on fungus simply because there was nothing new to report. However, we now have three new medications which I believe are the final answer to the problem of ridding our cats of fungus. I have found that it takes all three products used in conjunction with each other to do a thorough job. Even though these are very effective, it does not mean that we can lessen in any way our vigilance so far as hygienic measures are concerned. We must still use every precaution to prevent the spread of infections, and some very important tips on how to do this will be brought to you at the conclusion of this article. So, let's go into these new products and find out what they will accomplish.

GRISEOFULVIN

I have always thought that if we were to be successful in our battle against fungus we must have something that would attack it from beneath the skin. At last, something has come along that will work from the inside out and we again have the Englishmen to thank, for it is they who have produced an antibiotic named Griseofulvin from Penicillium griseofulvum.

When this antibiotic is given by mouth it finds its way to the cells that produce keratin and builds up a barrier which prevents any further fungal penetration. Griseofulvin is able to affect the rapidly growing hypha by nipping the tips, thereby stopping their further growth. The skin and fur then become resistant to the fungus with the result that uninfected new tissues will replace the older infected tissues. This can be noted very easily on the fur. As the fur grows the infected area will move out towards the end and the new fur growing behind it will be clear. As good as this new antibiotic is, it is still necessary to use topical dressings to kill off the outer growth of fungus infected tissues.

In England, Griseofulvin is produced by the Glaxo Laboratories and is called Grisovin. In this country, two drug companies are engaged in its production: the Schering Company, under the name Fulvicin, and the McNeill Laboratories, under the name Grifulvin. It comes in tablets of 250 mg. and is administered to the cats by mouth. One full tablet per day for adult cats, one-quarter tablet per day for very young kittens, and one-half tablet per day for kittens four months and older. Griseofulvin should be continued until no further evidence of fungus is noted—the length of time for recovery will depend upon the severity of the condition and the success in preventing new infections. In many cases fungus can be brought to a halt within three or four days, but it is wise to continue the antibiotic with only half of the amount for about two weeks. Griseofulvin does not appear to be toxic to cats and no ill effects have been noted other than perhaps an upset stomach, but this clears up quickly. Griseofulvin acts only upon fungi. It has no effect against bacteria and should not be used for fighting any bacterial infection.

FUNGIBAN

On several occasions I had expressed my views on the value of sulphur in combating fungus. In previous articles both Lime-Sulphur and Liver of Sulphur have been discussed. It is my belief that sulphur is still one of the best and safest medications to be used in ridding a cat of fungus. In using the former preparations it was necessary to dilute them with water—their main drawback, because the moisture would help new fungus to grow even though the solutions did kill off some of the fungus. Because of this, many dippings were required to bring the fungus under control. It had always been my hope that something in the line of sulphur would come along that did not need to be used in conjunction with water.

Today, we have a very good product named Fungiban, produced by the Chatham Pharmaceuticals, Inc., Newark, N. J. but not yet commercially available. It is a form of sulphur dioxide in solution which is applied directly to the skin of the cat without using any water. At the present time they have a little applicator tube which is small and easy to handle. By just squeezing the tube the liquid can be applied directly upon the infected area. In a few moments this will evaporate leaving no trace of any kind on the cat. The company is now working on a spray bottle that may prove superior to the applicator tube. In a very short time I expect Fungiban to be placed on the market so that everybody may obtain it. It has a pungent odor just as do the other sulphur solutions, but this will disappear very quickly and will not be noticeable after its use. It is not harmful to the cats and does a remarkable job of killing the fungus.

The only time that caution should be exercised with its use is in applying it to the face of tiny kittens: the fumes may cause a kitten some discomfort if they are breathed in. The best way to get around this is to place the kitten in front of a fan which will blow the fumes away from the front of the kitten.

In using Fungiban the best method is to apply it to the skin and rub it around and into the skin. Do this for three days in a row, then let the skin rest three days. In very severe cases this must be resorted to several times. It is a clear liquid and will not stain the fur, nor is it harmful to your cat. It is my belief that of all products, it is the safest to use.

TRIOCIL

Triocil contains Hexetidine, a new antibacterial, antifungal compound very useful in the treatment of various skin conditions. It is produced by the Warner-Chilcott Laboratories, Morris Plains, N.J., and comes in three forms: an ointment, a spray, and a shampoo. The ointment is very good to use on tiny kittens for fungus first appears around the eyes, the mouth, the nose and the genitals, and though the ointment is very powerful against fungus, it is gentle in its action making it a relatively safe medication for use at these tender spots. The spray is very convenient to use and can be applied to other parts of the body of kittens or at any place on the body of adult cats. The shampoo finds its best use as a final cleanup, bathing a cat before a show or upon its return from a show, scrubbing cages, and for periodic bathings as a precautionary measure.

There are certain drawbacks to Triocil in its use with cats which bear some consideration. To me, ointments are very messy, but since this particular ointment

IN PRAISE OF QUEENS

by Starr Gilmore

In a previous article, written quite some time since, (CATS, June 1954) I went to particular pains to point out the peculiar virtues of tomcats. I entertain no sort of doubt that it must have been accomplished to very general applause inasmuch as I was unable to hear a single dissenting voice. And I did, even at that very time, point out a few virtues of the female, howbeit in no manner large enough to do her justice. Lest therefore there should be about me the suspicion of a misogynist, which God forbid, I hasten to remedy the situation.

Let me here declare that the female has virtues of the most solid sort; virtues that her sisters of the human species would do well to contemplate at some length. Yes, go to the cat, thou female, consider her ways and do likewise. I am well aware that there is not much danger of my advice being taken. Nevertheless, it is my plain duty to give it, even though it should be treated with contumely and disdain.

Of late has come to the ears of all of us a loud and bitter outcry concerning the shortcomings of the educational system. Complaints about it are endless, confused, and varied. One common complaint is to the effect that it is afflicted with entirely too much feminine influence; that it does but make mollycoddles out of the males. As will presently be evidenced, there are errors in this argument of patent absurdity.

You will surely grant that the human race ought to have at least as much sense as cats. Nevertheless, there is some room for doubt. It is certainly true that the educational system that obtains among cats is of most ancient origin; that despite its tremendous age it has not been changed in a single particular; that it most assuredly meets the needs they require; that it has stood the test of time with remarkable success, and has enabled the users of it to survive and flourish even into our own day and age. This being true, it behooves us to inquire into the feline manner of education with particular care.

If too much feminine influence is to be deplored, then it is to be feared that cats fall far short of the ideal inasmuch as the females do all of the teaching. Nevertheless, the system succeeds to admiration and kittens learn very rapidly those things intended to fit them for future life.

With regard to discipline, the feline preceptress sees that it is maintained. She certainly scorns to have her life plagued by unmannerly kittens who refuse the instruction she has to offer. Should such a situation even begin to arise, a few cuffs here and there brings order out of chaos in less than no time at all. No kitten has so little sense as to display impudence, or worse yet, to dare act upon the presumption that he or she knows quite as much as may be required and therefore stands in no need of teaching.

Nor is the question of correct chronological age any problem that is allowed to vex the feline teacher. Her kittens, quite as soon as time permits, begin to learn forthwith, nor is there any foolishness about the matter. The necessity of having to wait because a kitten is not old enough to learn would strike her as being too absurd to consider.

In effect, cats believe in the tutorial method and each family of kittens has a private tutor on the distaff side. Even the most prejudiced must admit many advantages which accrue to this method of teaching. In fact, it is so well recommended that it is even employed by the human race. Since the bugaboo of numbers does not overwhelm her, the feline instructor does her teaching duties on a sensible scale. She certainly is not required, nor would she be witless enough, to attempt the task of giving instruction to forty-five or fifty kittens at the same time. Is any enlargement on this point needed? I think not.

All feline teaching is home teaching and that is the way it should be. There is no such thing as the turning over of progeny to another cat to have them properly taught, or even imagining that it should be done, certainly not to a female unable to boast the bringing up of a single kitten! Such manner of doing would be looked upon as an insupportable folly.

Among cats, quite as much as with other creatures, different intelligence levels are plainly discernible. So what? Does the feline teacher attempt to sort her kittens out and then teach them on various levels appropriate to their understanding? No, the same lessons are taught to all of them, both male and female, and if any fail to profit, then that will be one of their sorrows and none of hers. She teaches to the best of her ability, finally comes to the end of the subject, and once quit of it, refuses to vex her wits as to possible outcomes. Under this system, generally speaking, witless kittens come to witless ends. And indeed, why should they pass their folly on to another generation?

There is an old saw current among the human race that is somewhat to this effect: if the nose be applied too long and relentlessly to the grindstone, a certain dullness of apprehension will surely result. Cats are well aware of this; so much so, that the feline teacher is not always the stern instructor, but quite frequently enough the indulgent mother. For example, kittens play about more than a little, even to the extent of taking liberties with the tail of their maternal ancestor; liberearned 54, the South 40, and the East 28.

Distribution by individuals, however, was surprisingly even. Single awards went to 96 owners, two awards to 22, and three awards to 10. The Martinkes in the East, Madeleine Christy in the Midwest, and Whitney Abt in the South had four each. And leading the list are the Midwest's Bjerkeng's with a total of five.

So the 1958–59 show season passes from our ken with only our memories and such tangibles as our awards and our records to keep it ever alive in the Cat Fancy. Our congratulations go to the cats and the owners who earned CATS Magazine sectional and national awards, our thanks to all of those who tried for them; and to all The Fancy goes our assurance that our care and dedication toward keeping the All-Americans fair, accurate, and open will continue.

Our special appreciation goes to the judges, show secretaries, and others in the Fancy who have so unselfishly cooperated with us to be sure that every cat in the fifty states and Canada is properly credited with its show wins and its A-A points.

May we also say thank you to the many breeders who have advertised in this and in the All-Sectional issues. It is only through their firm support that we are able to make this contribution to the Cat Fancy and to all cats.

Now to all of you—Best wishes for a successful 1959–60 show season, full of good times and of great accomplishment.

OF QUEENS

ties certainly not granted to an adult of her species. The female is wise enough to know that frisking about promotes the appetite, strengthens the muscles, and does other things for kittens that formal teaching cannot accomplish.

Favoritism is frowned upon. The female teaches her offspring without regard to sex and such learning as she may have is equally bestowed, whatever the gender. This situation has been true from time immemorial and is true of cats the world over. This lack of any gender prejudice is something that the human race would do well to emulate.

Let me now advert to a thing which I previously mentioned; that is, to the fact that every male cat receives an entirely feminine education. Do you suppose that this causes him to develop a Madonna complex, or to regard his mother as being the epitome of all feline wisdom? It does nothing of the sort. Once free of feminine tutelage, he becomes the swashbuckling male that he is supposed to be and his background of education spoils him not a whit for the life he must lead in the world of adult cathood.

Nor does his education cause the tomcat to look upon females with a jaundiced eye. Not in the whole history of the world has there ever been known such a thing as a tomcat misogynist. You find curiosities of such kind in the world of men; never in the world of cats.

Feline teaching is utilitarian to the last degree for the very good reason that cats are among the most practical of creatures. For example, consider the matter of sanitation. To be sure, a homely and down to earth sort of subject, but still one that dogs might study with profit, only there's no danger they ever will, any more than the possibility that they will ever learn to wash their faces. Sanitation is a routine subject in every feline curriculum.

Therefore do I declare the teaching of the feline mentor a thing laudable and praiseworthy. Each female is a law to herself, nor would she wish her situation anything else. Her instruction may not always be of the best, but she certainly does not delegate it to another cat who might do even worse. Do you wonder that the female is called a Queen?

(This essay is affectionately inscribed to Gypsy, a lady of sorts, and very much what her name would imply.)

Cats Question Box

Conducted By E. A. Renaux, D.V.M.

Is there a cure for asthma in cats? My six-year-old male developed what the veterinarian diagnosed as asthma and prescribed some form of cortisone. When medication is stopped, in only a few days he is choking again. In the meantime he is healthy and has a good appetite.

—M. V. Pryce

6737 S.W. 34th Ave., Portland, Oregon

A cure is a treatment or medication that will completely correct an abnormal condition, and return of it is not expected. In cases of asthma this is a difficult problem. There are a number of drugs used, and some cases need treatment for varying periods.

I always read the Question Box first, and so hope you can help me with my beautiful White Longhair who sheds excessively at this time of the year. Her hair is so fine and silky that it mats badly and must be cut away. She is brushed twice daily during this season. Is there any thing more we can do for her?

She has also suffered paralysis twice. The local veterinarian diagnosed it as a slipped disc the first time, as she recovered after being anesthetized and stretched out for an x-ray. The picture showed no abnormality. Just a few weeks ago she suffered another attack. The veterinarian gave her penicillin and B_{12} shots. It took her a few days to get back on her feet and a week or ten days to get back to normal. This time he was inclined to blame it on tainted food, but as she is never outside we wonder about that.

—Alice Dunscomb

Windsor, Ill.

One of my clients has helped to check the matting problem by the judicious use of thinning scissors, and carefully thinning out the hair. The cat does not look quite as full and fluffy as usual, but it has helped and the cat does not have a "skinned" appearance nor big bare patches where the mats have had to be cut out.

Many cases of paralysis of the hindquarters defy an accurate diagnosis of the exact reason for it. I have found that the use of Vitamin B_{12} has given very good results.

scratches Julie has gathered (and she's had a few) have been unintentional on the cats' part and might have been avoided altogether if I had been more careful to trim the claws promptly. They do slap her, with claws sheathed, and Me Too once bit me on the ankle when she got too rough with him. But I'm proud of my cats. They haven't once betrayed my trust in them in respect to their relationship with Julie, and she's had many hours of fun with them.

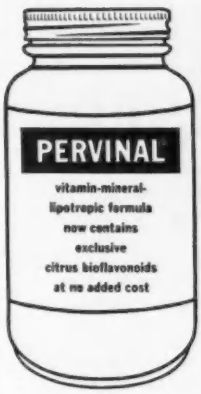

An isolated example? No, I don't think so. Having once become interested in the matter, I've made it a point to pay particular attention to similar situations. One notable example is the case of a friend of mine. When Julie was about a year old, this friend wrote me the glad news that she was expecting her first baby. But she, too, had the familiar problem: how about the cats? Her cat family consisted of two pampered Persians, who, at best, were not very sociable. One had actually become anti-social to the point where he had to be locked in a bedroom when guests were present. With the confidence born of my own happy experience, I tried as well as I could, by mail, to reassure my friend. She, as I had done before, decided the cats were to have a chance to get along with the baby before a decision was made.

Bless that anti-social Persian! He came through with flying colors and justified our faith in him. That old fellow, who couldn't stand guests in the house, is unbelievably patient and sweet with the baby. His mistress says, "Aren't cats remarkable? I just can't figure him."

Do cats love their one, special, favorite person so much that they respect and cherish those dear to him? My experience with cats has shown that they have a great sense of protectiveness toward their family and property and maybe that is part of the explanation. Whatever the reason, there is a great probability that any cat, given the opportunity and proper encouragement, will adjust quite easily to a new baby in the house. They especially need reassurance that they are still welcome and loved—just as an older child does when a new baby arrives.

This article is not meant to be a guarantee that all cats will become well adjusted to a baby, but I honestly haven't known any actual cases where an ordinary house cat posed a threat to the baby's safety and welfare, old wives' tales to the contrary. In my own case, I have found that the small amount of effort required to maintain a harmonious relationship in a household that includes both cats and a small child is richly rewarded. I still have the pets I love; my small daughter enjoys their company and learns valuable lessons about kindness and care of smaller, more helpless things; and Red has someone to open doors for him much more promptly than I ever did.

is so beneficial you could overlook its inconvenience. On tiny kittens the spray will be very irritating to their tender skins and they will cry in pain until it evaporates. Try to be considerate of kittens and use it sparingly. Considering the exorbitant cost of this spray the least the company could do is to use pure grain alcohol as a base instead of the isopropyl alcohol, especially for cats. When taken internally, isopropyl alcohol is very poisonous, and since the cats will lick it off they may run into trouble. I have warned you several times that iodine can be absorbed through the skin creating serious complications. I also feel that the isopropyl alcohol may be absorbed by the skin with similar results. For this reason I would not soak the cats all over with this spray but would use just enough to moisten the affected spots. The spray will discolor the fur but this can be washed away with the use of the shampoo—it will also turn the skin black which is very difficult to remove. We have mentioned the disadvantages of shampoos used with water, but in serious outbreaks on a number of cats, this shampoo will help control the spread of fungus so that the spray can take over the task of elimination. Although the shampoo takes a little longer it is more economical.

WOODS LIGHT

We all know that fungus appears on a cat's skin in a roughly circular shape from which the fur falls out. Such spots can be readily seen, but other places may be overlooked. With the aid of a "Woods" light it is possible to locate all of the fungus. This light will show up fungus as a bright pastel green color, not only on the skin but the fur as well. It will also tell you when the fungus has been brought under control, for dying fungus shows up as a grayish looking pale green. When no coloration appears at all, the fungus has been cleared from that spot. When one considers the great saving in time and labor, one of these lights is well worth the cost.

A Woods light is a lamp that produces ultraviolet rays filtered in such manner that no harm can come from the rays, and they may be used safely for cats. They are manufactured by the following companies: Burton Manufacturing Company, Los Angeles; Strobelite Co., New York; and Switzer Brothers, Cleveland. You may ask your veterinarian to get one for you.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES

Fungus is a mean adversary in battle and one must always be alert to its invasion. Go over your cats at least once a week with a Woods light, and be sure to part the fur in order to see the skin. As soon as any indication of fungus appears, get busy right away. First of all, pluck out all infected hairs, remove any scab you see, for fungus will be underneath, and then apply the medication. In order to do a better job on the cats the fur should be cut off all over the body, for this will help show up spots that would be missed with a full coat. Shaving is not necessary, just a clipping will do.

Go over the cages and surroundings with the Woods light, for fungus will show up there too. Any hairs left on the cages should be burned off. After a complete scrubbing job the cages should be painted, wire and all. It would be well to repaint all cages and cattery at least once a year. Before placing a mother cat in a cage with her nursing kittens be sure that you follow the advice given on the scrubbing and painting. If any cat or kittens have contacted fungus keep them away from others. After you have treated some of your cats, be sure that your clothing has been changed and that you have thoroughly sterilized your hands before touching another cat. Be sure to sterilize the clippers, the combs, the dishes or any other thing that the cats will come in contact with. It would be well to go back over my other articles on fungus for the advice given there is more thorough. Do not be afraid of fungus, and remember one important fact—early treatment is ninety per cent of the battle.

At the beginning I mentioned that it would take all three of these new products used in conjunction to be sure of ridding your cats of fungus. It would be wise to use the Griseofulvin internally, the Fungiban externally, the Triocil ointment for tiny kittens, and the Tricocil shampoo as the final clean-up measure. Each of these when used in this manner will help control the fungus and you will again be able to see your cats and kittens in all their beauty without being marred by fungus. Consult with your veterinarian for he is authorized to dispense these medications, and it is my opinion that he will be very glad to help you obtain and use these products.

No cat need come to the shows with any fungus at all if the procedures as outlined in this article are followed. Since the show season is almost upon us, let's all work together to stamp out this dreaded Ringworm—once and for all.

Next month, the discussion will be Cats and Public Health. There will be some alarming revelations that all of us would do well to prevent in the future.

Gr. Ch. Vel-Vene's Voodoo, with owner, Mrs. Robert A. Green

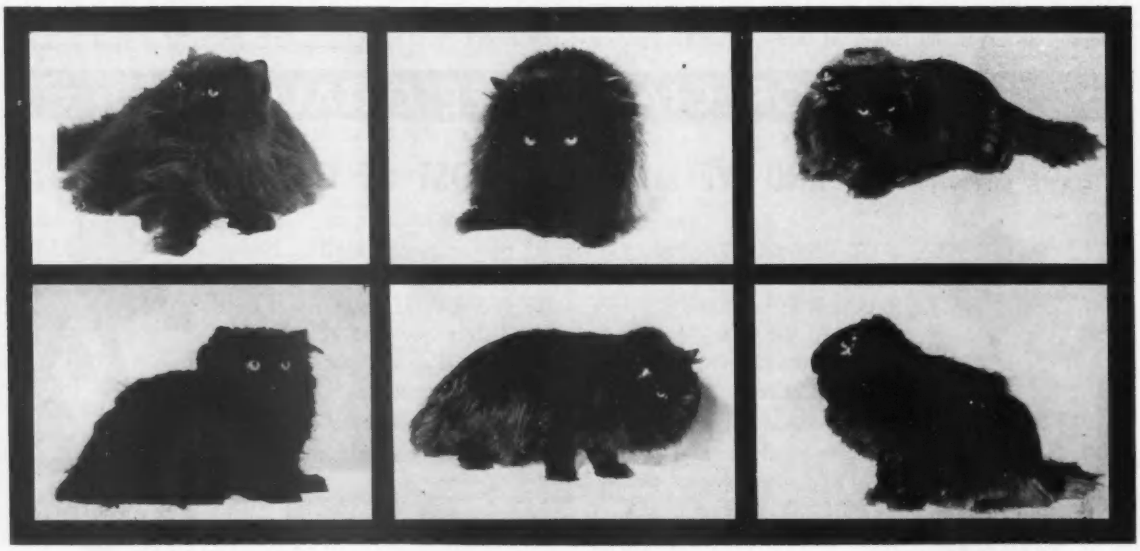

VOODOO-
CAT OF THE YEAR

Grand Champion Vel-Vene's Voodoo broke all show records this season with his 23 "BEST CAT IN SHOW" wins. He accumulated more points than any previous cat in history and was responsible for his owners winning the CFA Hydon Goodwin Challenge Award for the Best Cat and Best Longhair of the year.

Voodoo was born July 2, 1956. His sire, Gr. Ch. Lavender Liberty Beau, owned by Miss Elsie Hydon, was one of America's most famous Blues, selected CAT OF THE YEAR in 1950. Voodoo's dam, Ch. Longhill's Black Velvet, purchased from the late Anthony DeSantis, was the Best Black every time shown during her very first season, selected All-American Black female in 1956.

Voodoo's pedigree is abundant with noted Grand Champions and Champions and he is a credit to the cats and the owners of the cats which preceded him.

In winning the CAT OF THE YEAR award, Voodoo, now retired, out-scored approximately 10,000 other felines shown this season.

DOUBLE GRAND CHAMPIONS

WOLFGANG'S MADEL

Harriet, Betty, and Bob
Spent last season on the job —
Trotting us from East to West
Where competition was the best.
Here's the tally for their pain
Of the wins we three did gain.
Betty's FRAUNDE won the most
Of the top wins we three boast.
In All Breed three time BEST CAT —
Mars, Carl, Frances — thanks for that.
Matil, Eileen, Wayne and Lynne —
Four Specialty BEST CAT wins.

CONCORDIA MARENGO WOLFGANG

Under Conrad, Pat, Lynne, Don,
Lorraine, Lila, Ralph we won
Eight each, SECOND BEST and BOX CAT.
RANGO'S top Smoke Male plus that.
FRAUNDE, Seal Point gal so dear,
Is female Shorthair of the Year —
Madel, Black Smoke wench so sweet,
All Midwest Longhair females beat,
As well as Smokes, from coast to coast.
To all who helped we send this TOAST!

The Back Fence . . .

September brings Labor Day, but—joy of joy—the task of writing this month's column will be sheer play. So many good clippings and several interesting news releases make it so.

One of the best being that the College of Veterinary Medicine at Washington State College has accepted a grant-in-aid from American Cyanamid Company's Agricultural Division for the study of the cause and cure of virus disease in cats.

According to the chairman of the department of clinical medicine and surgery at Washington State, such studies on cats are becoming increasingly important because of the large and growing number of felines now encountered in small animal practice.

This work will be carried on under the direction of Dr. Ott, chairman of Department of Clinical Medicine at Washington State, and Dr. J. R. Gorham of the United States Department of Agriculture. Dr. Dieter Berger of the Veterinary College will head the team of scientists who will use all resources available toward finding answers so important to treating cats.

It is gratifying to know that the challenge, so long neglected, has been accepted by science. With the help of a company's interest and endowment, there may soon be a victory over most feline disease.

Tying in with this a little, the Humane Society of the U. S. has made available a fifty-seven frame color filmstrip, with recorded narration, that presents facts about our nation's surplus cats and dogs.

They urge groups and clubs to use this film to show how uncontrolled breeding has caused more than forty million pet-animals to be homeless. The cruelty of this wanton breeding is generally unrecognized. Owners hold to the mistaken belief that if they find homes for the litters, there is no harm done. But, these are the homes that would be open to the already unwanted kitten or cat.

"Dogs, Cats and Your Community" shows how our over-surplus of animals places a financial burden on tax payers and private philanthropy, and, even more important, that the suffering of these homeless creatures could be prevented.

The movie and record may be rented from the Humane Society, 1111 E. Street N.W., Washington 4, D. C., for $1.00. It can be purchased for only $5.00.

The New York Mirror had an article by Bill Slocum reporting on the Greenwich Village Kitten Orphanage, part of the Greenwich Village Humane League. This group was organized years ago by Alice Gore Manchester who was president until her death last December. Gypsy Rose Lee then took over the office and has proven a worthy successor. No token president, she devotes a great amount of time and energy to the cause.

The League praised the Sanitation Department of New York. They told of many instances when the men of that department had proven to be homeless kittens' best friends in that city of hurry and alleged indifference.

There is a window at the corner of Jane and West Fourth Streets in New York, where stray kittens play and sleep and eat. The society has found it an excellent way to supplement an income that is made up solely of contributions and bequests. People who enjoy kittens at play slip anything from a penny to a five dollar bill into the slot in the window. Sometimes, he who comes only to watch, stays to adopt.

Luckier than are those waifs, is a sister-and-brother team which was adopted in 1939 by Mr. & Mrs. Weber of Columbus, Ohio. Mike and Ike are still living—and twenty years is a ripe age for a cat, particularly two from the same litter.

Mike, however, isn't the guy he once was and prefers spending most of his time sleeping. Ike still manages to sparkle with girlish charm on occasions and is most fastidious about her appearance.

Mrs. Weber told the interviewer, "I'm sixty-eight and Mr. Weber is seventy-three. We all are old together around here."

The Los Angeles Times ran a story about another venerable female feline—Pooli, the World War II veteran who just celebrated her fifteenth birthday.

She was born in the Navy yard at Pearl Harbor in 1944. James Lynch, sailor, took her aboard the attack transport USS Fremont. She saw action at the Marianas, the Palau group, the Philippines and Iwo Jima. When her ship crossed the equator, she became a shellback. Battle station alarms sent her scurrying to the mail room where she hid in a mail sack.

Today, her owner reports, she has given up all military maneuvering, but has never lost a battle to any neighborhood dog or cat.

Cats just don't ever seem to lose. . . . perhaps it goes back to the tale that comes from Egypt. The story goes:

"In the beginning all cats were savage, but one of them made friends with a fox. Unfortunately, the fox was trampled on by a buffalo and so the cat became a great admirer of the buffalo—until a lion lunched on his new-found friend.

"The kitty just decided to become a lion lover when along came an elephant. The cat took one look at what the elephant did to his lion and decided to stay with the pachyderm, until a two-legged hunter appeared. The elephant took off. The feline became the friend of man. One disillusioning day he saw the man cringe and bow and scrape before a woman.

"'At last I have found the strongest living being in all creation', smiled the cat.

"And so the cat has been faithful to woman for all the centuries ever since and has never been disappointed."

The above is from Rose Bennett's column in the Richmond News Leader. All indignant letters from male readers should be sent to her. J.L.
